Passionate, driven and focused on creating a sustainable future. With 22 years of experience working in the sustainability and community engagement space, I continue to collaborate with organisations and people who are wanting to implement positive sustainable initiatives. My passion is connecting with champions and leaders, sharing and communicating, collaborating and partnering, and engaging with those who are driven to create a sustainable future for themselves, their organisation and the planet.

Embracing and educating the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) is my focus, starting in 2016. Finding ways to assist organisations in understanding and implementing the SDGs has provided many opportunities to see positive change. From being aware of the SDGs to understanding how they work in real-world actions, locally and globally, is the journey we all need to take. We need to collaborate, innovate, communicate and look for positive solutions if we are going to create a global sustainable society. This is why the SDGs as a global roadmap is so vital to successfully achieving this goal. People, Planet, Prosperity: No one gets left behind. I like to think of the SDGs as a 'strategic plan for the planet'.

In January 2020, I travelled to Japan to become a certified facilitator for the 2030 SDGs Game. This worldwide phenomenon has been played in corporations, governments, community organisations and schools. Seeing the gap between awareness to understanding their purpose and how they are implemented was a constant concern, so experiencing this game has not only addressed this concern but has assisted organisations in embracing the SDGs and creating positive change. Currently I am 1 of 3 Australians certified to deliver the game.
